Hey, Sandy. Thanks for reaching out. I can't imagine having any objections at all, especially since your immediate neighbors are already on board. Best of luck with the construction!

Cheers
Herb

Hey Herb-

You probably received notification from DC Zoning about an application that Bonnie and I have to put a one-story addition on the back of our house. As our "alley-adjointing neighbor" (I just made that up ☺ I wanted to reach out to you specifically to see if you guys wanted to discuss or had any concerns. Based on the relevant angles and lines-of-sight, I don't believe you'll actually be able to see it from any point on your property, but happy to walk it thru with you and air any issues.

The only folks that will actually see the addition are Leila and Malcolm (with whom we have had very extensive conversations literally for 10 years and have come to an agreement), and Peter/Dillis/Elsie, who have not expressed any concerns. Steve and Laurie are our other next-door neighbors, but they won't really have line-of-sight to the addition due to the property configurations and their tree line, and they are generally supportive of our plans.

Happy to send you some info, or just sit down and discuss if you guys like.

Hope all's well

Sandy
