What is NCRC?

NCRC-the National Child Research Center-is a private, non-profit preschool for children ages two through five. Since 1930, NCRC has operated at its present location at 3209 Highland Place, in the heart of Cleveland Park. As NCRC celebrates its 75th anniversary, the school has embarked upon a building project that will ensure that future generations of children can come and thrive in the same nurturing environment that makes NCRC so special. We hope you will take a moment to read the rest of this letter, learn more about the school's project, and perhaps even add your name to the growing number of neighbors who support this special school.

Why does NCRC need to change its facility?

In 2000, The Trustees of NCRC-charged with the welfare of the children-undertook a comprehensive study of the facilities. This study revealed several serious shortcomings that must be corrected. Here are some of the key needs:

- An indoor space where the children can run and play in inclement weather
- A separate space for the library and the music program
- A teacher workspace
- A few small meeting spaces where teachers can meet privately with parents
- Two new classrooms, the addition of which will allow NCRC to reduce the number of children in each existing classroom
- Moving children from the top (third) floor of the main house to enhance their safety

What is proposed by NCRC to meet those needs?

Since 1930, NCRC has not undergone a major expansion of any kind. In the winter of 2002, the school shared with neighbors its initial plans to construct a new building on the property and an addition to the main building.

NCRC's initial proposal contemplated adding nineteen new children to the program. Working hard to be responsive to the concerns of its neighbors, NCRC scaled back its plans to include only ten new children. Also, it redesigned the new building so that much of it could be built underground, eliminating 40% of the structure originally planned for above the ground.

In the current proposal, more than 80% of NCRC's land will remain open playground and green space. Both the Architectural Review Committee of the Cleveland Park Historical Society, and the Executive Committee of the CPHS itself, voted to recommend "no opposition" to the design. The District of Columbia's Historic Preservation Review Board (HPRB) will consider the design in January, 2003.

What is The Friends of NCRC?

The Friends of NCRC is a committee of neighbors, parents at the school, alumni families, and concerned citizens who have come together to support the school's efforts. Early in the process, an opposition group (calling itself "Cleveland Park Neighbors") formed, claiming to represent the neighborhood. This group has attempted to frame the debate as the school versus the neighbors. In fact, the Friends of NCRC exists in large part to challenge that claim and to represent the growing number of neighbors who believe in the school and feel strongly that it should be allowed to continue to thrive at its current location.

Despite the school's best efforts, it has not been able to come to an agreement with staunch opponents who have clearly stated that they will fight any new building and adding any new children. NCRC has offered to discuss a cap on its enrollment, ways to further improve its traffic management plan, and other practical solutions to legitimate neighborhood concerns; in every case, the reply has been "no new building and no new children." This fall, on its own motion, NCRC implemented several new traffic procedures that even the toughest opponents acknowledge have significantly improved the traffic situation around the school.

We, The Friends of NCRC, are frustrated by the determination of the Cleveland Park Neighbors to stop the project and-more importantly-with the tactics they have used to foment opposition. The flyers they have circulated have been unfair and misleading, comparing NCRC's proposed new building to a convention center and threatening that the school could add 100 children and result in three hundred new car trips daily. Despite what you may have heard, the school is in compliance with all requirements of its zoning orders and will defend itself against the charges that have been made by the opposition. We believe that many of their supporters have signed petitions of opposition under, in effect, false pretenses.

What can you do to help?

We would like to add your name to our list of supporters. We are not asking for money, just your support. NCRC has been an integral part of Cleveland Park for more than seventy years. We hope you will agree that the proposed upgrade to the facility is a reasonable step to take in the interest of providing preschoolers with the education they deserve. If so, please take a minute to sign and return the enclosed letter or simply e-mail us at: NCRCFriends@Yahoo.com. Thank you for taking the time to read this far. If there are any questions we have not answered, please e-mail us or call Anne Handwerger Large at 202-237-9676 or Jon Thoren at 202-966-1110. If you would like to visit the school, please call 202-363-8777 and a tour can be arranged. Happy New Year and thanks again.

NCRC is a wonderful institution that has served many families well over the past 75 years. There is no other such school in DC that is sensitive to neighbors, families, children and the problems of all types of children. We feel very strongly that NCRC should be allowed to proceed with their thoughtful and well-planned
