Ronald Schneck is the founding principal of Square 134 Architects. Mr. Schneck graduated with honors from Temple University in 1996, earning the prestigious Henry Adams Award. After distinguishing himself at a prominent architecture firm, Mr. Schneck established Square 134 in 2006. Since then he has designed multifamily, mixed-use, and residential projects in Washington, DC and surrounding suburbs. Ron also has extensive experience in commercial base building and commercial interiors. His design work has won several awards and has been featured in The Washington Post, Washingtonian, Washington Spaces, ArchitectureDC and others. In addition to working with major for-profit developers, Ron remains committed to affordable housing and has provided design services to non-profit groups including Jubilee Housing, Manna, DC Cornerstone and AIA|DC Community Design Services. Additionally, Ron is committed to mentoring young architects and has worked as adjunct faculty at the University of Maryland (UMD) and frequently participates in lectures and juries at area educational institutions.
