Re: Case 02-30, Georgetown University Boat House

Dear Ms. Mitten:

I am writing to express my support of the Georgetown University Boathouse and to urge the Zoning Commission to grant the appropriate zoning for the construction of the boathouse.

The building of this boathouse will be a significant asset to the District of Columbia. It will provide a facility for an environmentally sound, non-polluting recreational activity on the Potomac River. Rowing is a sport which is enjoyed not only by its participants, but also by residents and tourists who watch the rowers from the shore.

The building of this boathouse will provide a home base for the men's and women's rowing programs at Georgetown University. It will also allow much needed space to be freed up at Thompson's Boat Center for District of Columbia high school rowing programs. Thompson's Boat Center is filled to overcapacity. Many of the District's high school rowing teams are forced to wait long periods of time while other high school crews launch their shells from the limited dock space.

The placement of a boathouse on the proposed stretch of the Potomac River, upstream from Key Bridge, is consistent with the long-term plans of the National Park Service. Historically, boathouses have been located in this area for more than 130 years. During this time, and particularly over the past 40 years, this portion of the Potomac River has been the training area for hundreds of Olympic and U.S. National team members. Washington, D.C. is unique in that it can provide training facilities within the city for bright, young rowers who want to further their education or work in the federal or D.C. government.

For all these reasons, I urge you to grant the necessary zoning permits to allow Georgetown University to build its boathouse.

Yours truly,

Paul L. Knight
