t

Ms. Carol Mitten, Chair
D.C. Zoning Commissioner
441 4" Stree t NW. Suite 210
Washington, DC 20001

D.C. OFFICE OF ZONING
2003 MAY 21 P 4:08

May 18, 2003

Friend;

As one close to the Washington scene and a very important participant in relation to "Vision", yesterday, today and tomorrow, the future is triggered by the present. The present moment isthe only one we have to move into the future; a future can in harmonony with the natural goodness of enironment as a result of serious and current analysis.. Such isthe subject of making a boat basin; rather another one on the Potomac River below Georgetown, D.C.

As an old; and I do mean Old into ninety years I'v raced with the Dempsey Canoe Club in Regattas against the Washington Club. The building housing that out fit burned down with the old boathouse, all this below the Washington t Canoe Club shorefront. Now there is a demand or request fo an area quite disturbing of that upstream of the Washington Canoe Club area. This delicate strand of "tidewater" appears to be at the limit of geodetic sufficiency and especially at this part of the river bank the turmoil evidently would be disastrous for sch u action of that particular tricky ebb and flow current with a artificial bank test the limit of resistance to the natural distribution of that tidewater.

Thank you for yoyr intense study for the potential of this tussle between the God of Nature and the God of human voracity. Thank you for your answer to this reasoning!

Sincerely,

Tadeo "Spike" Zbwicki
Forlyn of The American Canoe Assoc.
as Chair man, Cr ising!

cc William J. Rhodes of Washington
Canoe Club

ZONING COMMISSION
District of Columbia
Case 02-30-31
Exhibit 224

ZONING COMMISSION
District of Columbia
CASE NO.02-30
EXHIBIT NO.224

FE Y HUMANIDAD