Dear Sirs:

The C&O Canal and Towpath are treasures enjoyed by so many Washingtonians and visitors to the Nation's Capital, it would be deeply regrettable to allow any aspect of it to be disturbed or disfigured. The Georgetown University plan to build a huge boathouse on the river, near the Key Bridge, seems to me to be a threat to the beauty and the integrity of the Canal landscape. I hope the Zoning Board will act to make certain that – if a boathouse must be built – the structure will be small enough and low enough not to interfere with the natural beauty of the towpath and its relationship with the river and the bridge.

There are thousands of us who are relying on the Office of Zoning to preserve snd protect this national treasure.

Yours truly,

Irving and Juliet Sablosky
