

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

DC OFFICE OF ZONING

RECEIVED

JUN 12 PM 4

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

ZONING COMMISSION
District of Columbia

CASE NO. 06-06

EXHIBIT NO. 014

ZONING COMMISSION
District of Columbia
CASE NO. 06-06
EXHIBIT NO. 94

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

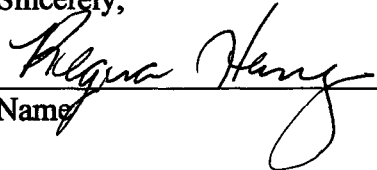

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

1504 N 75E
Washington DC
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

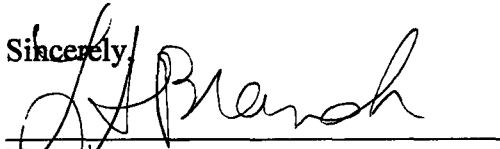

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

2438 Monroe St NE
Address WDC 20018

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

4844 TEXAS AVE S.E.
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

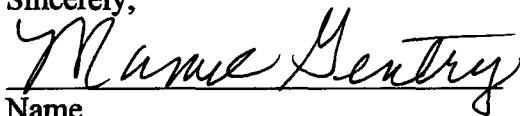

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

1908 17th St SE
Address Wash DC 20020

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

1218 Stevens Rd S.E.
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

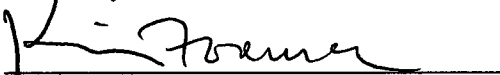

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

913 Valley Ave SE
Address Wash, DC

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

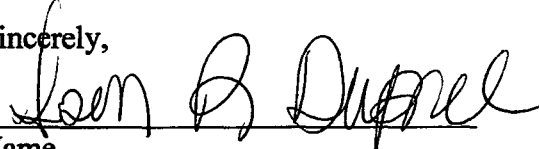

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address
20020

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

2661 Douglas Rd. SE.
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

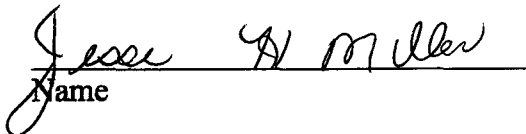

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

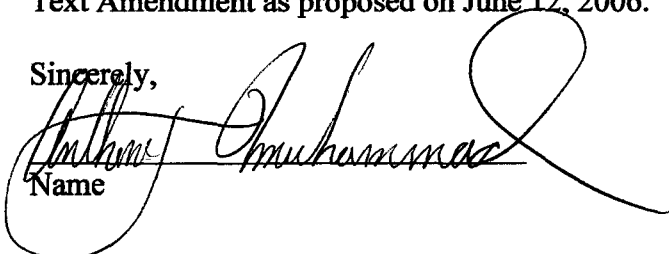

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

1609 21^{PL} S.E. DC,
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

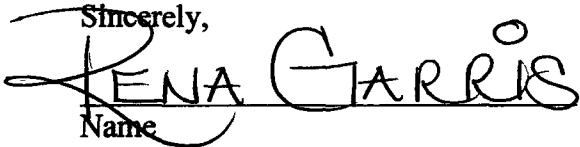

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006

Sincerely,

Nichole Miller
Name

5107 7th ST NE Wash. DC
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

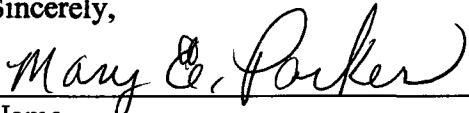

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

David Lee ^{Home} (202) 232-1662
Name

2634 15TH ST NW #9F
Address WASH DC 20009

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

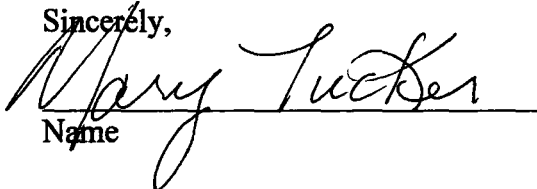

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006

Sincerely,

Steve Toule
Name

4500 3rd St SE
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Derek Rauenell

Name

242 35th Street NE # 2

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006

Sincerely,

Kenneth McKenzie
Name

1835 Good Hope Rd S.E. #102
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

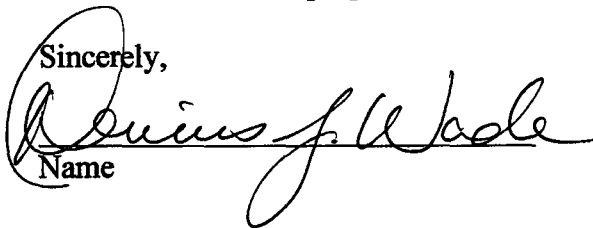

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

2701 BRUCE PL SE WASH. DC 20020
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

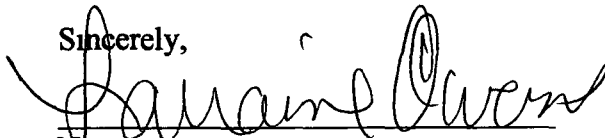

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006

Sincerely,

Name

1806 14th St SE
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

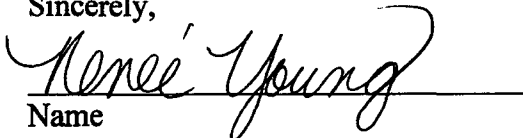

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

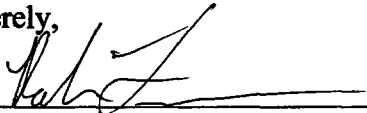

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

1436 Cedar St SE

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

5160 14th SE Washington DC 20019

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Linda Miles
Name

3058 Stanton Rd #103 Wash D.C. 20020
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

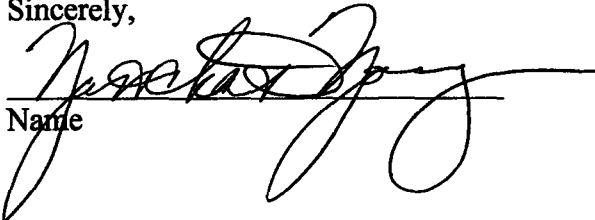

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

1673 W St SE - Washington DC 20020
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

1613 17th St SE, 20020
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

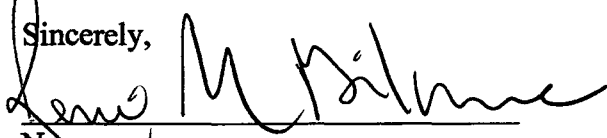

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right; the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Frederica Wedd
Name

1619 17th St SE
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Tracey Wright
Name

1456 Bangor St SE. #201
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006

Sincerely,

Omar Finch
Name

2506 pomey Rd. SE #203
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

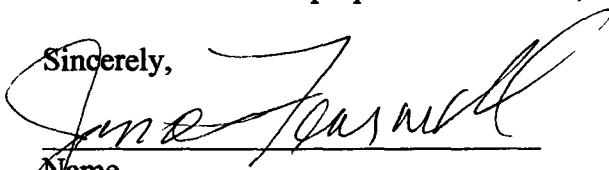

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

1847 Goodhope Rd SE. WP 207
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

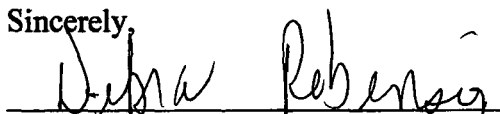

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

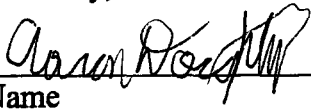

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006

Sincerely,

Name

1208 Eaton Rd. SE.

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

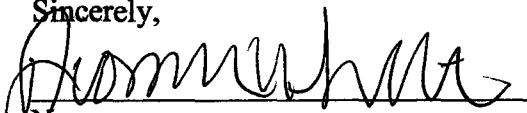

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

1509 V Street SE
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

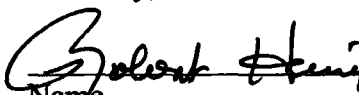

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

THANH VAN
Name

1724 Camisota AVN
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Kenneth Ball
Name

2906 Pomroy Rd #302
Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

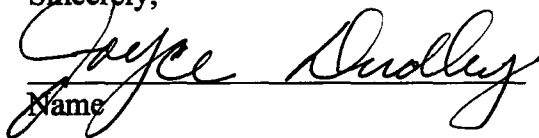

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

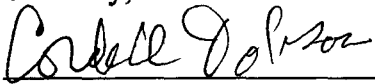

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

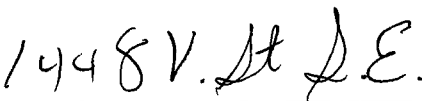

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

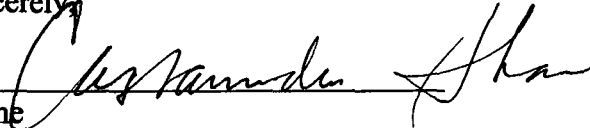

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

1118 "C" ST NE
Address
Wash. DC 20020

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

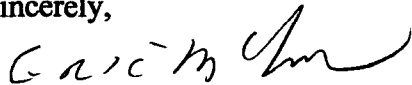

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

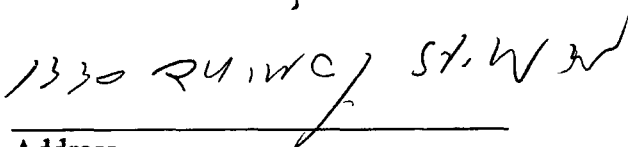

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

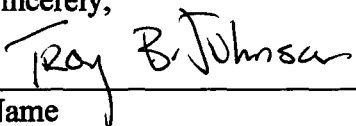

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

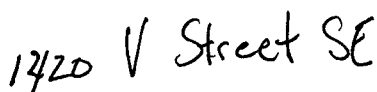

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address Washington DC 20020

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

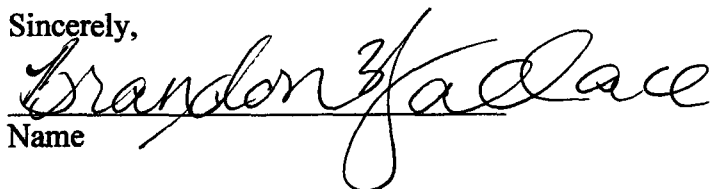

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006.

Sincerely,

Name

Address

Zoning Commission of the District of Columbia
One Judiciary Square, Suite 210-South
441 Fourth Street, NW
Washington, DC 20001

RE: ZC Case 06-06 "Charter School Text Amendments"

Honorable Members of the Zoning Commission,

I am deeply concerned about the effect that certain rules being considered by the Zoning Commission would have on my community and the City's neighborhoods if they were to be passed

The original version of this Text Amendment adopted on an emergency basis on February 13, 2006, and recommended to the Zoning Commission for adoption by the Office of Planning on June 12, 2006, established reasonable guidelines for siting of charter schools. The Office of Planning report clearly stated that "the proposed text amendment resolves the immediate concern of protecting established, small-lot neighborhoods from possible negative effects of school uses without putting severe burdens on the location of new schools." The Amendments were widely supported.

The changes proposed on July 10, 2006, however, remove the very protection that the Office of Planning itself urged the Zoning Commission to adopt.

By allowing charter schools of 16 students or fewer to locate in residential property as a matter of right, the proposed change would permit residential properties to be converted to non-residential use without notice to communities and without any opportunity for citizens to comment on the adverse affects that the school might have on their neighborhoods. The Office of Planning itself has admitted that there are "possible negative effects" that may place "severe burdens" on the neighborhoods where these schools may locate. At a very minimum, citizens should have the right to be heard through the special exception process.

I urge the Zoning Commission to reconsider this change and vote to adopt the original Text Amendment as proposed on June 12, 2006

Sincerely,

Name

Address

