BIOGRAPHY

Paul co-founded Wolf | Josey Landscape Architects after twelve years of working on a diverse range of civic, academic, institutional and private projects primarily throughout the Mid-Atlantic region. He has specific expertise in urban and campus design, tree preservation, soils, construction, native plants and integrated stormwater management.

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Invested in the design of Charlottesville, Paul is the Chair of the Tree Commission and active member of the PLACE Design Task Force helping to guide decision making related to design and canopy creation/preservation within the city. Prior to Wolf | Josey, Paul worked as a Project Manager at Nelson Byrd Woltz for seven years working under Warren Byrd, with a focus on urban, campus and institutional projects. He oversaw campus masterplans and the implementation of various mixed use developments, urban parks and campuses.

At Urban Trees + Soils, he focused on the detailing of historic and urban parks with a focus on rainwater reuse as well as innovative soil and planting specifications. Additional work experience includes mixed-use and community master planning in Gurgaon and New Delhi, India. He is an Eagle Scout and was a contributor to the book, Up By Roots, Healthy Trees and Soils in the Built Environment by James Urban.
