

I support this upzoning because I live nearby and would love to stay in the area. I recently had my second child, and I'm hopeful that more 3+ bedroom apartments will be available when I need to move to a bigger place. Building more units in this desirable area will also help affordability and enable more people to live in a great neighborhood. The people who end up living in this development would also have lots of low-carbon commuting options, which is helpful for DC's climate goals.
