Hello,

I'm writing now to voice concern over the implementation of the ZC a racial equity analysis tool: <https://dcoz.dc.gov/release/zc-racial-equity-analysis-tool>

While a focus on racial equity in zoning matters is admirable, forcing all new development to layer on research and planning of so many facets of the city and history that will require more employees and consultants and increase time and costs, which are precisely the opposite of what we need in housing construction in this city. This will also add another layer of veto points with which NIMBYs to use in opposing such greatly needed housing. Please reconsider this action and work on ways to REDUCE the cost and complexity of housing construction in DC, as that would be the best path to improving racial equity in housing. Thank you.
